

Marie Crawford appointed to DD board

County Commissioners have named Marie Crawford as the newest member of the Franklin County Board of Developmental Disabilities. She succeeds Jean Williams who did not seek reappointment when her term expired in January.

Mrs. Crawford is no stranger to FCBDD. She has been active as a parent advocate. From 2006 to 2008, Mrs. Crawford was associated with the Ohio State University Nisonger Center's LEND program, which is an advanced graduate interdisciplinary leadership program.

Mrs. Crawford and her husband, Dan, live in Clintonville and are members of Our Lady of Peace Parish. They have three children, two of whom receive agency services.

Board President Dean Fadel welcomed Mrs. Crawford to her first board meeting on April 25th. "We're delighted to have you on our board and look forward to working with you," he said.

The board is composed of seven members, five of whom are appointed by the County Commissioners and two by the Probate Court Judge. Members receive no compensation.

Art league and FCBDD team up for exhibition

To celebrate the Month of the Young Child, the Ohio Art League joined with FCBDD's Early Childhood Development Partnership in April to present a multi-sensory art exhibition, In a Sense/ Innocence.

Enrolled children, along with artists Ryan Agnew, Christine Miller, Daric Gill and Catherine Bell Smith teamed with FCBDD teachers Theri Brady, Kathy Bernon, Danielle Norman and Darren Thompson to create pieces of art reflecting the ways children explore their world with their senses. The art work was on display at the Gateway Gallery, 1552 N. High Street.

"I was thrilled with the opportunity to partner with the community in such an important and powerful way," said Rebecca Love, Director of FCBDD's Early Childhood Department. "It isn't often that time stops to hear the voices of children, but it did with this show."

FCBDD's Early Childhood Partnership serves children with and without disabilities from ages 1 to 6. Children are provided hands-on experiences that encourage sensory and emotional development.

A brother's concert by Lynn Turner

On April 8th, West Central School hosted a classical music concert by Stephen Chun and three fellow musicians from Upper Arlington High School -- Jake Muratore, Somer Alshire, and Josh Wydick.

Stephen has an older brother, Sam, who has attended West Central School for the past fourteen years, and chose Sam's school as his senior Captstone project site.

Stephen is planning to study music composition starting next year and wrote a piano piece especially for this concert. Stephen and his friends also performed two J.S. Bach cello suites, a Chopin prelude, and original songs written by Somer and Josh. West Central audience members enjoyed the music and were mesmerized by the Upper Arlington students' talent.

A huge thanks to Stephen and his friends for sharing their musical talents with West Central!

Singing Duo performs at ARC North

The folk rock duo, Wishing Chair, performed a free concert at ARC North on April 4th.

Duo member Kiya Heartwood had visited ARC North for a solo show in October and said she would return. She contacted staff member Lyn Herron and asked if she could come back and bring her Wishing Chair partner, Miriam Davidson. Of course, Lyn gladly agreed.

The performance included a couple of surprises, including the rock and roll classic, "Twist and Shout," and the Buckeye favorite, "Hang On Sloop," which was a brave effort coming from a Kentucky Wildcat fan!

Self-advocates have their day with legislators

In what is believed to be a first for central Ohio, people with developmental disabilities had the opportunity to meet personally with state legislators and pose questions as well as offer comments about issues of concern on Friday, April 5th. Legislative Day was sponsored by the Central Ohio Self-Determination Association (COSDA) and held at FCBDD's Bixby location.

Legislators attending were state senators Kevin Bacon and Charleta Tavares, and state representatives Mike Curtin, Bob Hackett and Michael Stinziano.

Special guests included DODD officials Zach Haughwout (representing Director John Martin), Kelly Miller and Sherry Steinman, and county board superintendents Rick Marriott, Nancy Neely, Jed Morison and Laura Zureich.

Topics under discussion included Medicaid expansion, Medicaid buy-in, the state budget, the Employment First program and accessible parking particularly for vans.

"The event was a huge success," said ARC South staff member Jaime Graham, who serves on the board of the self-advocacy group. She was especially pleased to see 156 people in attendance.

Getting ready for the big event by Becky Niles

Approximately 50 recreation members had the opportunity to try on and take home formal wear from the Formal Wear Boutique, held April 5th at West Central School. No one left empty handed!

The boutique was coordinated by Shawna Spanel, Recreation Program Coordinator, with valuable assistance from students of Ohio Dominican University.

Over 200 dresses, suits, tuxedos, ties and other accessories were donated for the boutique, which was open to recreation members attending the Recreation Spring Formal. ODU students inspected, sized and sorted all of the donations in preparation for the boutique, and sent dresses and other items to be cleaned and pressed before giving them away.

Along with the students, Mike Butchko and Ed Ruiz, FCBDD Recreation Specialists helped recreation members select and try on the formal wear.

Formal wear was donated by ODU students, friends, FCBDD and ADD staff, Ohio State students, the Fairy Good Mothers, Grandview Dance Plus Ballroom and others. Dry cleaning, hangers and bags were provided by Rockwood Cleaners and Sterling Cleaners.

FCBDD trains for "active shooter" scenario

In the wake of an alarming series of mass shootings in public schools, including the tragedy at Sandy Hook Elementary School in Connecticut last December, FCBDD staff are undertaking security training.

Nearly 100 agency staff attended a program titled "Active Shooter Training for Educators" held at Administration on April 4th. The program was presented by James Burke, Instructor with the Ohio Peace Officer Training Academy.

According to Officer Burke, 468 violent deaths occurred in school settings in the U.S. between 1992 and 2010. Of these, 348 resulted from shootings and 67 from stabbings.

"We've got to think outside the box and take steps to enhance our survivability," he said. "The most important thing is to foster an environment of communication."

Officer Burke referenced a research study of the active shooter phenomenon by Lt. Dan Marcou indicating that the shooters go through five phases: fantasy, planning, preparation, approach and implementation.

One of the seminar's most striking moments was listening to a tape of a teacher's 911 call during the Columbine High School shooting incident in Colorado in 1999.

"We cannot predict the origin of the next threat," said Officer Burke, noting that the assailants in some recent incidents were neither students nor staff. "We must develop a plan, work with law enforcement, and train."

John Fleming, FCBDD's Associate Director of Human Resources, is spearheading the agency's security training. "While we hope and pray the training is never actually needed, we have to be as prepared as we can be," he said.
